

Versatility, precision, readiness, comfort

These are the cornerstones of Nex Line, which will have a new headquarters in 2020

Two thousand and twenty was an important year for Nex Line, a company specialising in the processing of extruded aluminium alloy profiles, despite the well-known events linked to the pandemic. In fact, it moved to its new headquarters in Chiari (Brescia) in an area of 5,000 square metres, whose functionality, extremely dynamic layout and comfort for employees mark a turning point for the company, ready to meet the needs of its wide range of customers even better, offering itself as a one-stop partner. “We primarily serve customers who want the smallest possible number of contacts, thus reducing logistics and management costs”. “Our core business is made up of two strands: we both process our customers’ own profiles and manufacture complete customised products, in particular profiles for road signs, signage and advertising panels. Also last year, we incorporated our sister company Tecnosign, which specialises in illuminated signs, totems, frames and assembly or pre-assembled kits: finished products that have now been transformed into a specific brand with its own line,” say Arianna and Davide Chiarini, who run this future-oriented company founded by their father in 1993. Quality and precision in machining are added values for Nex Line, which guarantees 100% accuracy in visual checks, which are often not taken for granted or guaranteed by other companies. Thanks to the versatility of its equipment, the Chiari-based company is able to carry out a vast number of processes. “We can start with the simple extrusion and cutting to size of a profile according to drawing, all the way up to machined, assembled, painted, packaged and labelled frames. “We have extensive experience in the interior lighting sector. Cutting to size, blanking and numerical control machining are among the main processes we offer our loyal customers”, explain the owners. Another plus for Nex Line is the fast delivery, thanks to a well-stocked warehouse: “In our new spacious and organised premises, we also carry out the warehouse service for our customers, who are both in Italy and abroad”. The employees, for whom the new building has reserved areas for dining and relaxation, are also a valuable resource for the company: “Especially in these difficult times, we have paid the utmost attention to the needs of our employees, with greater sensitivity with regard to schedules, shifts and personal needs. The same philosophy applies to relations with our customers and strategic suppliers”. Nex Line is also at the forefront of cooperation in the eventual administration of vaccines, responding to the invitation of Confindustria, which has urged the use of the factories of private companies as centres for the inoculation of serums to citizens. “Despite the period, we believe in the future, not least on the strength of our diversified customer base”. “Moving to a new location in a difficult year like 2020 expresses our confidence and our desire to bet on the years to come”. “On the other hand, a product like aluminium, which is light, recyclable, corrosion-resistant, ductile and malleable, lends itself to endless possibilities and applications. Product quality and customer satisfaction will always be our main goals, and we are committed to constantly improving our market position through continuous innovation of services and processes”. ■
